Cell phone antennas may end up in 'water tower'

Planned Southport cell phone tower was approved by a narrow margin by the West Sacramento Planning Commission, with a condition that the developer offer some design choices. Above, a computer rendering shows the proposed "water tower" version of the communications facility (from a City of West Sacramento staff report)

An 80-foot cell phone tower near Tower Mart in Southport may be approved by the planning commission Thursday night. The tower could be in the shape of a faux water tower instead of a faux tree.

The Vista Towers facility proposes to serve Verizon, AT&T, MetroPCS and Clearwire (wireless Internet) at 3200 Jefferson Blvd., on the west side of the street south of Linden Road. The tower would go 156 feet from a nearby residential property line and some homes.

The city planning commission approved the project in December by a 4-3 vote, requiring the proponents to return to the commission with some design alternatives to the original "monopole pine" design for the tower.

City staff believes the 80-foot "pine" would look better than the older-generation tree-style cell tower already on Linden Road, but that it would not blend well with surrounding shorter trees and structures.

They recommend the water tower design because it would conceal the antennas and "has the best chance (of the proposed designs) of becoming an icon in the community."

A "windmill" design was also offered.

The commission will discuss the tower as part of its meeting April 5 at 6 p.m. at city hall, 1110 West Capitol Avenue.

DEJA VU: Stolen pickup truck, car chase & foot chase:

Fleeing suspect caught

On March 21, West Sacramento police asked for help from the public catching a man who was seen in a stolen F-150 pickup truck, and then led them on a brief chase including a stint going the wrong way on a freeway, a car accident and a foot chase. The man got away, but a 30-year old passenger in the stolen pickup was arrested on several felony charges.

The man who escaped on foot near the 700-block of Glide Avenue was identified as Lino Garcia, Jr., age 34.

On March 27, police caught him. The story involves another stolen white Ford F150 pickup, another brief car chase and another foot chase. But the second time, the story had a different ending.

Sergeant Nathan Steele of the West Sacramento Police Department told the News-Ledger last week that the second pursuit started on West Capitol Avenue.

"Last night at approximately 10:30 p.m., one of our officers located a stolen F-150 white pickup. He attempted a vehicle stop. There was a brief chase."

When the chase reached Enterprise and Industrial boulevards, the officer used a "pursuit intervention technique" or "PIT" when speeds were deemed slow enough.

What's a PIT?

"At low speeds, a patrol vehicle attempts to tap the rear end of the (suspect) vehicle and cause it to spin out," explained Steele. "The vehicle spun out. The driver fled on foot, but was captured after a brief foot chase."

City cracks down on anchored 'liveaboards' at Port of West Sac

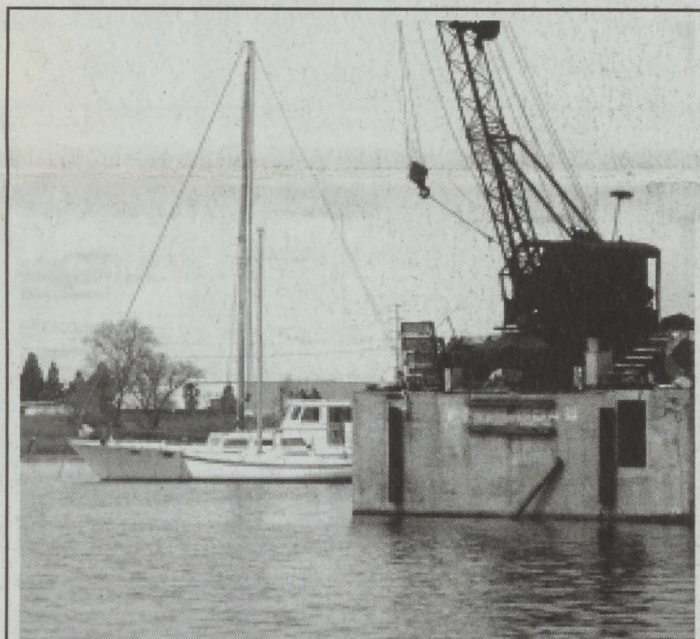

Permit required -- as is some kind of plan for sewage disposal

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

The City of West Sacramento is apparently cracking down on the "liveaboards," some of whom have long lived on boats anchored or tied to shore in the Port of West Sacramento's turning basin.

Mike Luken, the port director, told the News-Ledger that the crackdown involves litigation with some of the boaters.

"The city is enforcing its long-term anchoring permit," said Luken. "The city requires that vessels moored more than 90 days obtain a permit... and that they re-

Moored boats and barge in the turning basin at the Port of West Sacramento. This section of the port is just south of Industrial Boulevard and west of Harbor Boulevard. (These vessels may or may not be involved in current litigation with the City). News-Ledger photo.

Area elected officials join River Cats CEO Jeff Savage and mascot Dinger outside Raley Field to celebrate the completion of infrastructure improvements surrounding Raley Field, March 30. Among the improvements was the opening of 5th Street nearby. Pictured, left to right, Sacramento County Supervisor Roger Dickenson, City Councilmember Mark Johannessen, Mayor Christopher Cabaldon, River Cats CEO Jeff Savage, and City Councilmember Chris Ledesma. new the permit on an ongoing basis. There are a number of people not complying with it."

Affected are some recreational boats and barges at the port. Some of them have disposed of their boats, but some boats and barges remain.

"There were some people that removed their vessels voluntarily," added Luken.

Has the city bought any of these boats to ease the liveaboards out?

"There have not been any cash settlements as of yet," said Luken.

He referred the News-Ledger to the code enforcement department for more information on the crackdown, but a spokesperson there could not immediately be reached.

One of the concerns about the boaters is about sanitation — essentially, it's the question of where their sewage goes, if not untreated directly into the port.

"The permit requires that you utilize a licensed facility for sanitary disposal," Luken said.

The nearest accessible sewage pumpout station is probably in Rio Vista, he said (a distance too far for a casual boating trip), but the boaters could also use a licensed hauler to remove their waste by truck.

Body found near docks south of West Sac is identified

The harbormaster of a small marina near Clarksburg found a body in the Sacramento River on March 26.

Robert LaBrash, Chief Deputy Coroner of Yolo County, told the News-Ledger yesterday that the body has been identified as that of Kao Alexander, age 36, of Sacramento. He said that the body appears to have been in the water for two or three weeks, and has no obvious signs of trauma. The cause of death is still being investigated.

Helping out an Italian playboy in need

I have an Italian pen pal who enjoys telling me all about the real Italy, which she claims most Americans don't really know. She says that the typical tourist only has time to see the works of Michelangelo and Raphael and Leonardo da Vinci, or go to the Colosseum in Rome and stroll through that city's many piazzas and museums. But according to my pen pal, there is much more to Italy than gondola rides down the Grand Canal to St. Mark's Square in Venice, or taking a scenic drive through Tuscany and the beautiful Lake Country, and that the real Italy is not quite so charming. Anyway, we were discussing all this yet again the other day during one of those online instant messaging conversations which are becoming so popular nowadays, and our little IM chat went something like this:

"First let me tell you about my day," began my pen pal, who is a self-employed English teacher and translator who gives language lessons to both private Italian citizens and employees of large Italian corporations who are in need of improving their English skills, "and then I have a favor to ask of you."

"Okay," I wrote back.

"To begin with, I had to drive all the way across town (she lives in Bologna) to get to my first lesson, and believe me, just going from place to place in Italy requires that you take your life into your own hands. All the normal rules of the road that you American drivers just take for granted are basically ignored here. Instead, they are replaced by lots of honking and shouting and angry hand gestures, mostly directed at us women drivers whom most Italian men don't think even belong behind the wheel of a car. Anyway, although I was late, I did manage to get to my first lesson, only to discover at the end of it that I was being assigned a new student who lives way over on another side of the city who wanted to see me during the lunch hour. When I informed my corporate boss that I usually like to eat my lunch during the lunch hour, he said that I would have to eat later because my new client is the son of a very important man and that neither one of them are very good at waiting. To make me feel a little better about missing the only meal of the day that I usually have time for, he informed me that

My Back Pages

By Daryl Fisher

I would be paid handsomely by my new client, at least 100 Euros per hour-long lesson, which is indeed pretty good pay for a freelance English teacher and translator. So, I got back into my little car and somehow managed to safely get all the way across town and locate the home of my new student. And you are not going to believe what happened next!"

"What?" I asked with interest.

"Well, it turns out that my new student is a young man of about 25 and he was dressed like all Italian men with money do -- impeccably. In fact, I'm sure that every article of clothing he was wearing -- including his shoes -- had designer labels on them. So, acting like we were longtime friends, he directed me to a very nice study full of books and invited me to sit down across from him. And then he informed me in perfect Italian what he wanted of me."

"Which was?"

"He wanted me to teach him -- over the course of no more than six lessons -- enough pickup lines, in perfect English, to attract some of the many young American women he apparently meets all the time at lavish parties that his father hosts for visiting American businessmen and their families."

"You're kidding?"

"No, I'm very serious. At first, I thought I would just decline the offer, but the more I thought about it, the more I wanted those 600 Euros! So, to make a long story short, I did accept the position, but my problem is that I don't really know any American-style pick-up lines, so I thought I would ask you if you have any suggestions."

"Well, I'm sure the pick-up lines of my era were a lot different than the modern day ones, but I actually did write a column many years ago about that topic, and I think I can remember a few of them, if that will help?"

"Great! What are they?"

"Well, there was 'My name is Elmo, and you can tickle me anytime you want', but your new student might not be too familiar with Sesame Street. And I also remember one that goes 'You don't know me, but I think you really should'."

"Oh, I like that one! Do you have some others?"

"How about 'I have lost my phone number; can I borrow yours?', and 'Can I end my next sentence with a proposition'?"

"You are being very helpful, Daryl! Can you remember any others?"

"I'm afraid I can only remember one more,

'He wanted me to teach him -- over the course of no more than six lessons -- enough pickup lines, in perfect English, to attract some of the many young American women he apparently meets all the time at lavish parties.'

but you might mention to your new student that I'm pretty sure it's the only pickup line that actually works with most bright and attractive young American women."

"And which one is that?"

"It's the one which goes, 'Hi, I'm very rich, and I don't believe in prenuptials'."

Playing a man down for 60 minutes against the Bay Area Ambassadors, the Sacramento Gold came back from a one-goal deficit to tie the game 1-1 on Manolo Pina's goal in the eighty-second minute.

But a victory wasn't to be for the Gold, despite several good chances in the closing minutes. The game went directly from regular time to penalty kicks where the Ambassadors prevailed 5-4, sending them into the Lamar Hunt U.S. Open Tournament and eliminating the Gold. The Ambassadors regular time goal was scored by Brayan Walle in the 64th minute.

The Gold's next game is against the North Coast Tsunami at the College of the Redwoods in Eureka on Saturday at 1 p.m. Next home game is on April 15th against the San Francisco Stompers at 7 p.m. at the River City High School Stadium in West Sacramento.

Oakland A's beat their farm team in West Sac

More than 10,000 fans showed up at Raley Field in questionable weather on March 31, to watch the Sacramento River Cats host the Oakland A's major league baseball team.

The minor leaguers fell by a score of 9-0, as the A's Tommy Milone pitched six perfect innings.

The Oakland Athletics loaded the bases in the first inning, scoring three when River Cats fielder misplayed a fly ball. They scored three more on a home run by Coco Crisp later.

The exhibition game was stopped due to rain after seven innings. The River Cats are the AAA minor league affiliate of the Oakland team.

On Monday, the River Cats hosted the Stockton Ports, winning 8-6 in a game featuring a grand slam by Grant Green.

They open their regular season tomorrow in Las Vegas, and will play their first home game in West Sacramento against Reno on April 13.

NEWS-LEDGER

The committee would like to thank Helen Thomson, the 2012 Honorary Chair and speaker for the luncheon, for her participation. On behalf of the committee, she presented a check from the proceeds of the luncheon to Patty Wong, Yolo County Librarian, and Heather Muller, Library Services Director, for the purchase of women's history materials.

The committee would also like to thank the many sponsors who made the luncheon possible and were noted in the luncheon brochure. Inadvertently, Soroptimists International of Davis was not mentioned in the brochure as a sponsor. We apologize for the omission and want to thank the Davis Soroptimists for their continued support of YCWHM.

Thanks also to Robert LaBrash, Yolo County Coroner, for creating the video documenting the history of the YCWHM. The committee must also acknowledge the support of the City of Woodland for its wonderful facility and Charles McDonald who volunteered to take photographs at the luncheon. L&S Printing once again printed a comprehensive brochure for the luncheon; and a big thank you to Strelitzia Flower Company that provided the lovely bouquets and floral arrangements for the tables. In addition, the committee greatly appreciated the outstanding job the Anderson Family Catering & BBQ of Winters did preparing the food for the luncheon.

Without all the help from the community, individuals, sponsors and businesses, the luncheon would not have been such a success. Thank you to everyone who helped with the event and provided for our local libraries.

Foster parents' rights

This letter is in regards to the foster care article on February 22, 2012 for the Soup On Fundraiser for Yolo County foster kids which featured Cherie Schroeder of YCFKE (Yolo County Foster and Kinship Education).

Cherie Schroeder was quoted in the Daily Democrat On March 6, saying "Nurturing time spent with a hurt child, whether for a day, month, year or a life time, can serve to change the course of a life and make a resounding positive difference in how they feel about themselves."

I was a foster parent for a year and a half to a sibling set (3) and they were taken away unexpectedly and given to another placement without notice or just cause, causing irreparable damage to the kids and myself.

I was told in the court hearing that "you are just a foster parent", therefore without any rights. I had intention of adopting the kids, but wanted additional testing for the youngest who was developmentally delayed so he could begin to get tested.

Regardless of the foster care agreement with the Yolo County, foster parents do not have any parental rights.

I subsequently settled with Yolo County regarding this case, but feel there needs to be transparency regarding the expectations of foster parents to the community who are supporting this organization. Anyone interested in foster parenting should work with a non-profit agency so they have an unbiased social worker represent them as parents who care for the kids. ANNETTE DAVIS Woodland

In Loving Memory of Danny Ray Bonilla

Danny we miss your loving heart, the kindness and humility that were the hallmark of your everyday life. This past year your family and friends have grieved deeply. We have sought to remember the lessons of pride, grace and compassion you showed us all. Your sense of humor and infectious smile, that led so many of us through good times and bad, are missed so very much.

Danny, a loving and thoughtful son. A generous and loyal brother. A man devoted to his family one and all. A trusted Friend to so many. A man of true character as shown by the devotion showed to his beloved Pit Bull Buster.

Danny passed into the hands of God April 4, 2011. His entire family love and miss him very much. When the grieving is too much to bear knowing you are with Mom eases the burden. The entire Family wish to say thanks to everyone for all the prayers and good wishes they have received in the past year.

"I'd like the memory of me to be a happy one,
I'd like to leave an afterglow of smiles when life is done.
I'd like to leave an echo whispering softly down the ways, of happy times and laughing times and bright and sunny days.

I'd like the tears of those who grieve, to dry before the sun of happy memories that I leave behind when day is done."

Description of Work

The West Sacramento Police Department (WSPD) is upgrading their onsite Security systems with a new Integrated Access Control System and Video Surveillance System's (ACS/IPVSS). The primary function shall be to restrict access through specific doors, gates or barriers to secured areas of the facilities. The ACS/IPSS will automate the opening and closing of the buildings, restrict access after-hours by cardholder privileges, and monitor specific control spaces for intrusion.

The system shall use a single seamlessly integrated database for all ACS/IPVSS functions. This integration shall be provided in one operating environment.

The system shall provide a multi-tasking environment that allows the user to run several applications simultaneously. The ACS/IPVSS software shall run on a Windows Server 2008 R2 32 bit operating system and be licensed by Microsoft under the Windows Server 2008 R2 Logo program. Such licensing shall ensure that the application was specifically designed for the Windows Server 2008 R2 platform and follow Microsoft's development guidelines for this operating system. The ACS/IPVSS shall be able to run in conjunction with other Windows Server 2008 R2 applications such as MS Word and Excel while concurrently announcing on-line access and security alarms and monitoring information.

The system shall operate on a Windows Server 2008 R2 multi-tasking, multi-threading 64-bit operating system. The System software shall be a true native 64-bit application built from the ground up for Windows Server 2008 R2, utilizing Windows Server 2008. The System shall NOT be ported over from another operating system (i.e. UNIX, DOS, or OS/2) and shall not be a Win-16, UNIX, QNX or OS/2 program using a Windows NT Server. In addition, the system shall not be a UNIX or QNX Server using a Windows client.

All system application modules, features, and functions shall be generated from a single source code set. In addition, the source code must be designed using object-oriented software development techniques and compiled into native 64-bit applications. There shall not be separate source code bases for access control and ID badging. All system features and functionality listed in the proceeding pages shall ship with each system. Features and functionality available to the "WSPD" shall be determined through licensing and shall be controlled by a software license key. The "SI" will train the Owner in the development and configure the new ACS/IPVSS and IPVSS. System shall be SiPass integrated ASL5000-SE, MP2.5 Standard Edition or approved equal. ACS/IPVSS System software shall not have annual re-occurring licensing fees of any kind to the WSPD.

COUCH THEATER DVD PREVIEW

PICKS OF THE WEEK

"The Iron Lady" (PG-13) -- Meryl Streep pulls a full-force Streep-a-thon in this scattershot biopic about Margaret Thatcher, England's controversial conservative prime minister. Framed by the quasi-coherent mutterings of the elderly Thatcher in her late-life mental decline, the film shows a highlight reel of Thatcher's life and career.

This flick managed to rake in another Oscar for the veteran actress, but that about sums up the appeal. Those unfamiliar with Thatcher's bumpy political career won't get much enlightenment from the muddled narrative. If the Academy Award brought this film to your attention, then you pretty much know everything about it you need to know: Streep is a good actress, even when she's in a boring and obscure movie.

"Miss Representation" -- Teenagers spend an incredible amount of time in front of the television or computer screen, in addition to being bombarded with advertising over every inch of the real world. This documentary explores how women are portrayed through the media, and how that affects the development of young people. It's not a singular study, but a general look at the role of women in the media, all punctuated with statistics. The film could be seen as an introduction into a broad and relevant discussion.

DOGS OF THE WEEK

"The Darkest Hour" (PG-13) -- A band of merry young folk goes to Moscow for a good time only to have their party crashed by a bunch of invisible aliens. The movie also is under attack by invisible character development and an invisible budget. Folks get turned into ash upon contact with translucent alien blobs, and any dread or excitement quickly evaporates as the movie becomes a silly, over-serious "Ghostbusters" cousin when the characters start fighting back.

Each character might as well have a red shirt with a number on it, as the order in which the unlikely protagonists are killed off is clear before the aliens even make their invisible appearance.

"Animals United" -- This kids' flick stands out from the pile of generic talking-CG-animal-adventures shoveled out by Hollywood, but only because this one is from Europe. So lacking in imagination and storytelling that it may as well be "Madagascar 6: Animals with Voices You Don't Recognize."

The plot has something to do with a lack of water, but this isn't "Rango." The animals make their foray into the land of people, but this isn't any of the myriad movies in which that happens either. It's just a weirdly familiar and wholly forgettable film. If you've run out of movies to show the kids, and "Animals United" is the only one left at bat, just let them play outside -- they might find an interesting stick or something.

Get Your Plate Into Shape

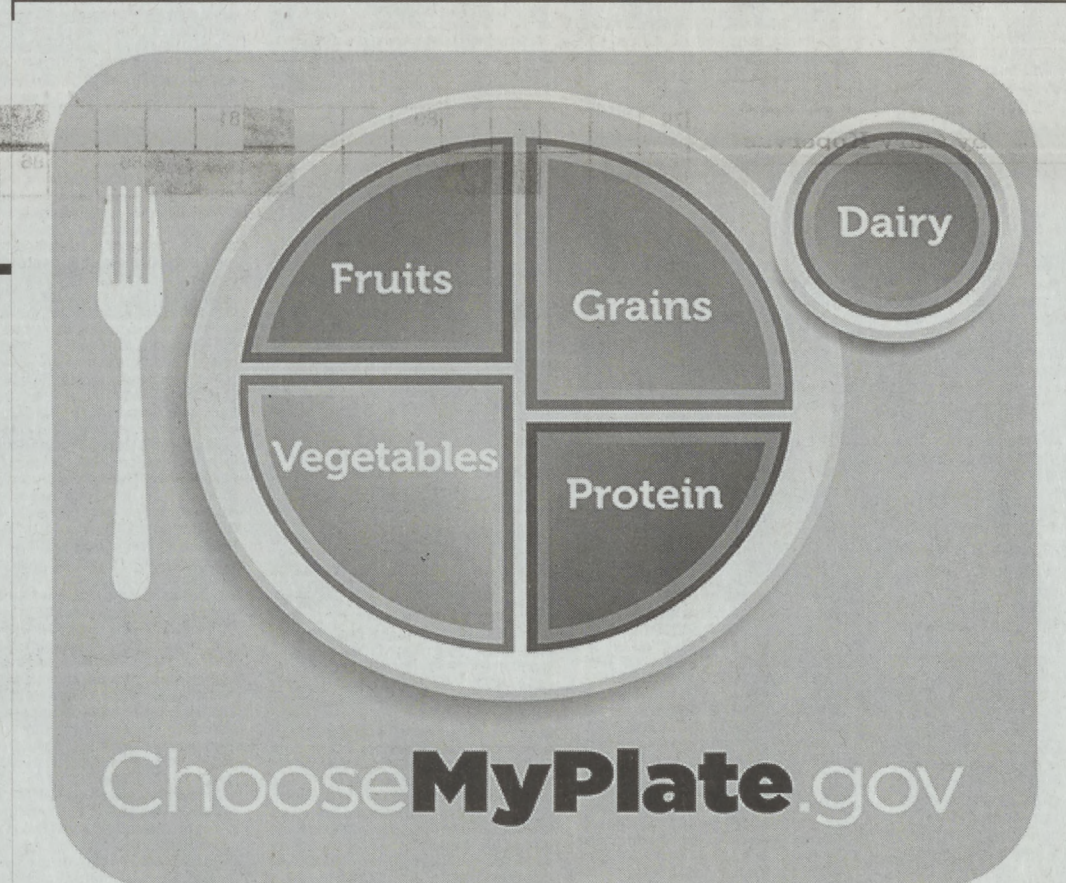

When it comes to exercise, the phrase "I need to get into shape" is a familiar one. But what about getting your dinner plate into shape?

The U.S. Department of Agriculture last year released MyPlate as the new food-group symbol to provide Americans with an easy-to-understand visual of what their plates should look like at meals. Eating is meant to be enjoyable, but it's important to be mindful of the portion size and content of foods. Find creative ways to make your plate look like the MyPlate symbol, with half of the plate consisting of fruits and vegetables, one-quarter lean protein and one-quarter whole grains, with a side of low-fat dairy.

Here are some tips to get you started with shaping up your plate:

--Think about the size of plate you use when eating. Does it resemble a serving platter or a saucer? Try switching to a 9- or 10-inch plate. If that still looks large and provides too much food, decrease the size again. Your plate will look fuller even though you are actually eating less food, thus lowering caloric intake and assisting in weight loss. Pile your plate with nutrient-dense, low-calorie foods like fruits, vegetables, lean meat, beans and whole grains.

--Sometimes our eyes deceive us when it comes to filling our plates. We think we only ate one cup of ice cream when we really consumed three cups. Measure out different foods into the dishes you use at home -- fill your cereal bowl with one cup of dry cereal, put one-half cup of brown rice on your plate and fill your favorite glass with 8 ounces. Note how the different portions look in or on your own dishes.

This also gives you a reference to use when eating away from home. Portion sizes at restaurants are typically much larger than recommended and provide extra calories, fat and sodium. Consider preparing meals at home to have more control over what ingredients are being used in your food (i.e. less salt, less butter, leaner meat) and the portion size served.

--Beverages also make up our "plate." The type of beverage and amount consumed can add significant calories to our caloric intake. Fruit juices and drinks, sports drinks, soda, drinks with added sugar like sweetened tea and coffee all provide additional calories. A large (32 ounce) soda typically contains 430 calories and a large (32 ounce) sweetened iced tea contains approximately 400 calories. Limit the high-calorie drinks to special occasions and include more water, low-fat milk and low-calorie drinks.

Use MyPlate as a tool to decide what foods and how much of each should be on your plate. "Get Your Plate in Shape" and find new ways to make mealtime more healthful and enjoyable.

SPICED PORK WITH SPINACH SALAD

Crisp flatbread can round out this satisfying salad supper. You can serve the seasoned pork as an entree with the salad topped with sliced oranges along with a side of brown rice or whole-wheat noodles, if you wish.

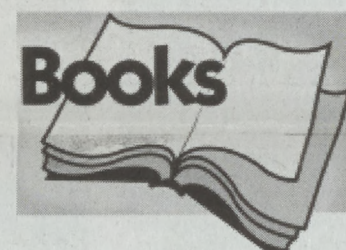

1 (1-pound) pork tenderloin, trimmed
1/2 tablespoon Sriracha (hot chile sauce, such as Huy Fong)
1 1/2 tablespoons brown sugar

1 tablespoon poultry seasoning
1 teaspoon garlic powder
1 teaspoon onion powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
Cooking oil spray
3 cups baby spinach leaves
2 cups thinly sliced Napa cabbage
1 cup red bell pepper strips
1/4 cup low-fat sesame ginger dressing (such as Newman's Own)

1. Cut pork crosswise into 1/2-inch slices; flatten each slice slightly with hand. Combine Sriracha, sugar, poultry seasoning, garlic and onion powder, and salt in a bowl, mix well. Add in pork, tossing to coat well.

2. Heat a large nonstick skillet over medium-high heat. Coat pan with cooking spray. Add pork mixture to pan, and cook 3 minutes on each side or until done. Remove from heat; keep warm.

3. Combine spinach, cabbage and bell pepper in a large bowl. Add sesame ginger dressing; toss well. Arrange 1 1/2 cups spinach mixture in each of 4 shallow bowls; top each serving with 3 ounces pork.

"Tutankhamen: The Search for an Egyptian King"
by Joyce Tyldesley
(Basic Books, $29.99)
Review by Larry Cox

The finding of the tomb of Tutankhamen by Howard Carter and George Herbert, the fifth Earl of Carnarvon, in 1922 marked one of the most exciting archeological discoveries ever. It was an exceptional find, since it was the first near-complete royal burial site uncovered in the Valley of the Kings. King Tutankhamen's golden death mask found in the tomb has, for many, become the defining image of ancient Egypt.

Carter's firsthand account of the discovery is riveting to read even 90 years after the fact:

"With trembling hands I made a tiny breach in the upper left-hand corner. Widening the hole a little, I inserted the candle and peered in ... At first I could see nothing ... but presently as my eyes grew accustomed to the light, details of the room within emerged slowly from the mist, strange animals, statues and gold -- everywhere the glint of gold. For the moment -- an eternity it must have seemed to others standing by -- I was struck dumb with amazement, and when Lord Carnarvon, unable to stand the suspense any longer, inquired anxiously, 'Can you see anything,' it was all I could do to get out the words, 'Yes, wonderful things.'

British archaeologist and Egyptologist Joyce Tyldesley examines in fascinating detail what archaeologists and scholars have learned about this young king and his significance in Egypt's history. She begins by explaining how Tutankhamen's tomb was lost, then located again after years of well-reasoned archaeological detective work.

Drawing on journal entries, reports and newspaper accounts from the 1920s, Tyldesley painstakingly documents the discoveries made as the tomb was cleared of its goods. The Tutankhamen family and its history are reconstructed to provide a more complete picture of the young king and the era in which he lived. The result is the fullest account to date of the discovery, life and times of Tutankhamen.
